

I recently became aware of an issue you are considering in regards to giving LPFM stations precedence over FM translator stations. I happen to listen to KLOVE Radio based out of Rocklin, CA. KLOVE has gone to great lengths to make their station as relevant as possible to me the local listener. They provide information on local events, have 800 numbers and other items to personalize the station to my area. Because of the size of the KLOVE Radio network, they can provide me with programming that is of a higher quality than that of other local LPFM Christian stations. I am not saying that LPFM stations don't have a place, but knowing the amount of people that listen to KLOVE Radio in our area would make a tremendous impact on those of us who listen to this format of radio if it were to be replaced by local LPFM stations. In this instance, I believe that "Bigger IS Better".

Respectfully submitted,
Eric Sorenson